Debra Livingston

Debra Livingston has served in various executive capacities throughout her career, with a concentrated focus on return-to-work programs. With over 20 years of workers' compensation experience, she started her career as a claims adjuster and moved into various facets of the industry as an account executive for Aetna Property Casualty, a broker consultant for Wells Fargo Insurance Services, and director of claims for a large Florida professional employer organization.

Debra is passionate about getting injured workers back work safely and being active through volunteerism. That is why as co-founder and CEO of ReEmployAbility, Debra has combined the two concepts and helped transform the way the insurance industry thinks about return to work. The Transition2Work program not only helps insurance companies and workers, but also gives back to local communities. To date, the program has provided nonprofit organizations with 6.5 million hours of volunteer work performed by workers who might otherwise be home.

Debra provides the industry with a fresh look at "community" and "business" as a force that must work together to be successful. Not only is community service the cornerstone of the company's philosophy, but it is a passion that Debra cultivates every day in her personal life as she dedicates her time to many local charities and causes in the Tampa Bay Area.

Debra serves on the executive board of The Spring of Tampa Bay, a not-for-profit whose mission is to prevent domestic violence, protect victims, and promote change in lives, families and communities. Debra is also active in her local church, Nativity Catholic Church, and supports Camp Southern Ground and The Heroes Journey Foundation.
