Daniel J. Louis, a partner of the firm, represents the interests of employers and insurance carriers in claims under the Defense Base Act, Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, and War Hazards Compensation Act. His practice areas also include employment litigation; personal injury litigation; asbestos litigation; and appellate litigation. Mr. Louis has additional experience as a consultant to baseball player agents in preparing cases for Major League Baseball salary arbitration hearings.

Prior to joining the firm, Mr. Louis clerked for The Honorable Philip S. Carchman in the Appellate Division of the Superior Court of New Jersey. Mr. Louis graduated from Rutgers University School of Law, where he was Senior Managing Notes and Comments Editor for The Rutgers Race and the Law Review and authored a published note: Nationally Televised Segregation: The NCAA's Inability to Desegregate College Football's Head Coaching Position, 9 RUTGERS RACE & L. REV. 167 (2007). While at Rutgers, he also served as law clerk to the Major League Baseball Players Association. Prior to Rutgers, Mr. Louis graduated magna cum laude from Albright College with a bachelor's degree in economics and political science. While at Albright, he was a captain of the baseball team and a member of the cross-country team.

Mr. Louis is admitted to practice in New York and New Jersey; before the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of New York, Northern District of New York, and the District of New Jersey; and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit.
