Give Kids The World

Give Kids the World Service Day

We are excited to partner up with Give Kids The World Village again in 2021 in a new and exciting way!

Last Year's Efforts - 2020:

Last year, even though the midst's of a Pandemic, the WCI community continued our ongoing support of the village, virtually. With virtual at home volunteer projects, over 350 individuals and families put together and completed over 5,500 masks and autograph books for the kids and families. In addition, we appreciate everyone who generously supported Give Kids The World during the WCI virtual silent auction. The total amount raised from the silent auction, separate contributions, and sponsorships amounted to over $93,000!

Volunteering in 2021:

This year we are thrilled to inform you that the village has reopened! Although not at 100%, kids and families have started to return to the village which is at about 20 percent capacity. Large volunteer groups are still not allowed on sight, so the planning surrounding our volunteer day is still somewhat fluid. This allows the village to keep a high level of safety for their guests, workers and volunteers but also allows for their Night of a Million Lights event!

Special hotel rates:

Special Hotel rates of $99 at the Marriott World Center for Friday and Saturday nights will be given to those who register for the conference and participate in the Give Kids the World event.

Pre-registration is required and can be accomplished by referring to the WCI website at www.wci360.com/give-back.

Night of a Million Lights

What is Night of a Million Lights? Give Kids The World Village closed to wish families in mid-March of 2020 due to the global pandemic, delaying more than 6,000 wishes. Night of a Million Lights was designed to raise funds to ensure that the wishes of critically ill children could return bigger and better than ever before once the time was right to reopen. It was such a huge success that the Village has decided to do it again in 2021 and WCI will be playing a big part in it.

To learn more about GKTW's Night of a Million Lights event, visit: https://youtu.be/E_d5NS7J2ec

Details:

WCI has been offered a unique experience to combine our conference in with GKTW's Night of a Million Lights event this year. Volunteer opportunities along with our annual Gala and silent auction will be held, wait for it...at the Village this year!

When: Saturday, December 11th 2021
 Where: Give Kids The World Village
 210 South Bass Rd.
 Kissimmee, FL
 Time: 5:00 pm - 10:00 pm

WCI will be holding a private event to tour the Night of a Million Lights event together beginning at 5:00 pm. Following the Night of a Million Lights event, we will meet in GKTW's very own Hoppingen Place to commence WCI's annual Gala and silent auction event!

- Kids & Families are welcome.
- Rides and several activities will be available for the whole family.
- No busses this year.
- Parking will be available at the village to all WCI attendee's personal vehicles.
- Sponsorship opportunities available.

This is the perfect event to have fun and network while serving the important purpose of raising funds for Give Kids the World. Dinner, silent auction, and entertainment will be provided along with admission to GKTW's Night of a Million Lights. The Silent Auction will include vacations, sports memorabilia, jewelry, purses, and many other exciting items.

Sponsorships:

We are seeking sponsors for this event and donations of items for the Silent Auction. Please see the Program Sponsorship and Silent Auction page at www.wci360.com/give-back.

Davie, FL*

Preparation of the mediation report and agreement should seem basic but as will be developed, it is not. What goes into the report (who was in attendance, not in attendance, agreement reached, impasse) will be discussed. Who drafts the agreement? What does it contain? What about using “bullet points?” When is it appropriate to start drafting the agreement before resolution of the entire case? What about contingent agreements and agreements requiring third-party approval? Mediation agreements are usually enforceable, but what are the exceptions to that?

Part 1: Interpersonal violence (IPV) and sexual harassment in the workplace have gained attention in recent years. It's important to develop strategies to better manage the issues so employers and employees don't feel caught off guard when either occurs. These distressing situations bring challenges to companies, employees, victims, and perpetrators especially when policies and mitigation strategies are lacking. The speakers will focus on how IPV manifests itself, provide some strategies for addressing it in the workplace, and cover insights for mediators and others attending mediation when dealing with sexual harassment cases in the age of #MeToo.

A simple statement of regret sounds easy but may not be so easy to express. We'll examine the use of apology: when it is appropriate and when it is not? Who initiates the apology and what role does the mediator play? The use of apology is actually written into the Florida evidence code. When is an apology admissible...and when it is not?

Everything in mediation is confidential – except when it's not. There's a long list of exceptions. Caucus (separate meeting) is an option in mediation but separating the parties often heightens distrust and may create a fear of mediator bias. Emotions run high in mediation but is it real or feigned? Is it something the parties need to work through to reach a resolution? Two experienced mediators will use war stories and law to explore the issues.

It is easy to identify the benefits of the workers' compensation system for injured workers. But do we regularly assess and consider what we do to avoid potential harm that the system may cause? While this may seem like a loaded question, there are clearly some misaligned incentives, complex claims processes and procedures, and a unique system that is daunting and intimidating to the injured.

The session will take a deep look at the workers' compensation system to identify areas of weakness and inefficiency, and suggest changes and technological advances that could provide a better experience and outcome for both injured workers and employers.

Lessons Learned and Moving Forward: 2020/2021 in the Rearview Mirror – Two Years of Impact on Workers' Compensation (Day 1)

(Day 2 of this program is on Tuesday, December 14, 2021 beginning at 9:00 am in Crystal Ballroom J1) See page 36. Day 3 of this program is on Wednesday, December 15, 2021 beginning at 8:00 am in Crystal Ballroom J1. See page 70.)

2020/2021 witnessed a series of events never before seen in America and hopefully never again to be repeated. Forever in the rearview mirror of our journey moving forward, the industry has shown its resiliency and ability to adapt to a host of adverse conditions.

Among the level-setting events pelting the industry in these defining years were: COVID-19, its associated deaths, and strain on hospital capacity and resources; extended business shutdowns, record unemployment, and widespread job loss; devastating weather events including hurricanes, flooding, earthquakes, mudslides, and wildfires; increasing dependence on technology; expansive data collection; growing privacy concerns; multiple cyberattacks from foreign countries on the nation's infrastructure; numerous instances of civil disobedience and "not so civil" disobedient instances; active shooter situations; and one of the most contentious election cycles ever recorded.

Sedgwick Executive Chairman, Dave North will offer opening remarks and introduce a series of sessions aimed at exploring what effect these events have had on the workers' compensation industry. Among the questions this series will address are: Where do we start in planning for the future? Will there be a "new normal" for our industry and what will it look like? And, most importantly, is there a need to begin an earnest review of the sustainability of our workers' compensation system? With an eye on the road ahead, this "rearview mirror" series will deal with many questions as we look for ways to thrive in this "new normal" world in which we all find ourselves.

The beginning point for addressing the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on workers' compensation is to understand its financial impact on the economy as a whole, the industries that the pandemic has affected the most, and whether the COVID-19 pandemic has impacted the number and character of non-COVID claims. In January 2021, the Workers' Compensation Research Institute released its first report concerning the massive slowdown of economic activity caused by the COVID-19 pandemic and the resulting effect on workers' compensation. The report also addresses to what extent COVID-19 claims have affected non-COVID cases and the various state workers' compensation systems' responses. WCRI and CMCI will discuss interstate and California-specific findings on COVID-19 claims and the impact on workers' compensation of the slowdown of economic activity caused by COVID-19, based on reports from the two institutes.

The events of 2020/2021 have fundamentally changed workers' compensation industry players and program practices. This session will explore how insurance carriers and service providers have responded in terms of pricing, coverage and service offerings, and contract terms and conditions. Driven by data and rapidly changing business needs, the evolution of claims management practices and service models will also be explored. Legislative compliance and benefit coordination continues to be an elevated business priority. Regulatory insight is essential. Exposure to the highly contagious coronavirus has redefined expectations at the workplace and employee interactions with customers and co-workers. Back-to-business

The COVID-19 pandemic redefined the workplace as we knew it and employee needs changed considerably. At the height of the pandemic, healthcare resources approached capacity, many employees worked remotely, and the industry came under pressure to adapt quickly to changing conditions. Telehealth became a widely accepted means of delivering care and expanded its breadth and scope of services rapidly. Working remotely also created new challenges as questions surfaced around how to establish a safe workspace at home as well as compensability of injuries that occurred in a remote setting. The importance of mental and behavioral health was spotlighted as many employees returning to the workplace exhibited increased anxiety, fear, anger, isolation, and depression. For those with new or existing work-related injuries, return-to-work practices were more complicated and often had to be modified due to position availability. Many of the adaptations that came out of 2020/2021 have proven to be positive and are expected to carry over in the years to come. Join us as we discuss these and other factors moving forward and ways to improve employee care and experience.

Kevin Farmer, MD
President, Florida Orthopaedic Society
UF Orthopaedics & Sports Medicine Institute
Gainesville, FL

The Injured Workers Inspiration (IWI) Awards were created to recognize the achievements of injured workers and their musculoskeletal physicians. Highlighting this year's most compelling stories of medical innovation and the conquering nature of the human spirit, these case presentations will both inspire and educate. Please join us as we celebrate the achievements of these remarkable patients and recognize the advances of musculoskeletal science.

Improving Outcomes of Peripheral Nerve Injuries

Speaker:
Daniel Penello, MD
Alexander Orthopaedics
St Petersburg, FL

During this presentation, Dr. Penello will provide an understanding of the pathophysiology, diagnosis, and treatment of work-related carpal tunnel syndrome, cubital tunnel syndrome, and radial tunnel syndrome. The audience will learn about nerve healing and the latest science on regeneration. The doctor will also share those evidence-based techniques that maximize outcome and reduce complications following peripheral nerve repair.

2:00 – 3:00 pm Labral Tears in the Hip

Speaker:
Michael Gombosh, MD
South Florida International Orthopaedics
Miami, FL

Dr. Michael Gombosh from South Florida International Orthopaedics will lead this discussion on labral tears in the hip. The presentation will cover normal hip anatomy and the role of the labrum. The audience will learn how to recognize and understand how preexisting alterations in anatomy can predispose an individual to labral tears. He will also discuss the complicating significance of preexisting arthritis of the femoracetabular joint in the presence of a labral injury.

Total Joint Replacement in the Workers' Compensation World

Speaker:
Arturo Corces, MD
Miami Institute for Joint Reconstruction
Miami, FL

Dr. Corces will discuss considerations for compensability of joint replacement surgery in the workers' compensation system. What is the anticipated post-operative recovery time and duty restrictions for employees who receive a joint replacement? What are realistic functional expectations and return-to-work timeframes? And what happens when something goes wrong? Are there alternatives to joint replacement and what are the known complications that can occur even in the most skilled hands?

3:00 – 4:00 pm Reducing Post-Operative Opioid Use with Minimal InvestmentSpeaker:

Christopher Baker, MD
Florida Orthopaedic Institute
 Tampa, FL

While COVID-19 has had a significant impact on the progress the United States has made in reducing the use of opioids, the drive for reducing opioid dependence in surgical patients continues. Over the last several years, the heightened awareness of the opioid crisis has led to significant shifts in surgical and pharmaceutical techniques to combat the reliance on opioids for post-surgical patients. Join Dr. Christopher Baker as he discusses his cost-effective formula for reducing the need for extended opioid use for his surgical patients while focusing on quality outcomes and timely return to function.

While most people run away from a tragedy, first responders run toward it with full intention and heart. This action, however, may come at a significant price to their mental health. Approximately one third of first responders experience significant mental health challenges such as depression and PTSD. Suicide rates are notably higher among first responders. In this session, a panel of mental health professionals and first responders will discuss the prevalence of compassion fatigue, trauma, anxiety, and depression among first responders and the stigma associated with seeking help. Attendees will leave with a better understanding of the unique behavioral health challenges faced by first responders and the importance of specialized interventions aimed at improving their resiliency and emotional well-being.

The healthcare industry invests significant resources to create positive patient experiences. It is well established that customer experience drives engagement, which impacts outcomes. In recent years, we have seen a shift in focus to providing a more holistic approach to health and wellness and a renewed focus on mental health. In a healthcare system that is complicated, we strive to provide positive patient experiences and ensure quality medical care is delivered. For the workers' compensation industry, however there has been a historical challenge in creating a consistent approach to communicating in a way that reinforces transparency and puts the injured workers' needs first. Given the bi-directional nature of physical pain and mental health, there is a significant need to provide better behavioral health support for injured workers who suffer from injuries with compounding behavioral health challenges. This session will enhance your understanding of the benefits of an advocacy-based claims handling approach and provide tangible strategies to improve patient communication to build trust.

1:15 – 2:15 pm "Living Abled" There and Back Again: A Physician's Tale Personal Journey Through – and Practical Take Aways From Injury Recovery

Speaker:
Christopher R. Brigham, MD
Sr. Contributing Editor for the AMA Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment
Hilton Head, SC

In fall 2018, cresting an illustrious career in clinical medicine, serving as Senior Contributing Editor for the AMA Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment, and having just authored a critically acclaimed book on healing and recovery from serious injury, Dr. Brigham himself became seriously injured, nearly dying.

Well, he's back – and has redeveloped this program to share with you latest developments in healing, injury recovery, and return to work – uniquely from ALL THREE perspectives of physician, author, and recovering patient. Genuinely new, practical insights are provided into healing of the body, mind, and spirit: there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of -- in even his own book!

Bottom line: this deeply-informed presentation is designed to advance the art and science of improving injury claim outcomes.

2:15 – 2:20 pm Break

2:20 – 3:20 pm In partnership with the prestigious National College Of Workers' Compensation Lawyers, the NWCR proudly presents:

Appeal, or Not to Appeal, That is The Question!

Honorable Terry A. Moore

Ramon Malca, Attorney

Gulf Stream, FL

As with war, you may not be interested in appeals but appeals are interested in you! Claims handlers know mastery of statute and regs is half the battle: the full "job description" requires ongoing familiarity with judicial construction of nearly every facet of a claim, some helpful and illuminating; some not so much.

Who's making all this law, and why? While few in claims have ever handled an appeal -- EVERY WC appeal started on a claims desk! Actively or passively, you're helping make the law. So, brush up your knowledge of the inner game!

Our superb panel – justice of a state supreme court; judge from a state's sole intermediate civil appellate court; two career-long friendly adversaries -- a renowned workers' and a leading industry appellate attorney – discuss whether to appeal (or if initiated by others, whether to see it through); holding attorneys accountable re indications for appeal, without asking the impossible; when stakeholders might be obliged to appeal (but also when to "hold em"), and why some appeals "based on principal" -- aren't -- even when asked to join as "amicus curiae." Finally, mysteries revealed: briefs and arguments that help, and those not so much (mirroring our opening, i.e., bad cases, AND bad briefs, can make bad law), coupled with deep insight into judicial opinion writing -- and your company's implementation of case law. A NWCR master class on how to, by those who do.

What's that got to do with claims -- or settlements? Everything. This enlightened presentation shows how by strategically accessing state, federal, and medical resources, you can achieve attractive case closures in the impossible cases while providing injured workers additional support and resources enabling them to also protect external benefits. Pure “win-win.”

Special needs and other trusts are discussed: claims professionals usually focus on interplay between Medicare and workers' compensation but ignore how Medicaid becomes a vital resource for injured workers. Add these skills to your CAT case tool kit. NWCR: How to, by those that do.

For decades, pain complaints have been treated with pharmacological treatments as the first option. It is well known that drugs have many side effects, including the misuse, overdose, and addiction that have characterized the national opioid epidemic. However, drugs may not be the most effective treatment of pain caused by musculoskeletal injuries. We will explore non-pharmacological pain treatment to include physical therapy. Data demonstrates that physical therapy delivered as a first option for musculoskeletal injuries, within three days of an injury, shows substantial reduction in healthcare utilization and disability duration as well as decreased likelihood of requiring future surgical intervention. Our speakers will also explore other effective modalities and approaches to reducing pain and increasing function after common musculoskeletal injuries.

9:00 – 10:00 am Evidence For Judges – Hearsay

Speaker:
Professor Emeritus Charles W. Ehrhardt
Florida State University School of Law
Tallahassee, FL

During workers' compensation trials, counsel often raise hearsay objections to the admissibility of documentary evidence. Although many jurisdictions are not subject to formal rules of evidence, many others are, and most apply some informal standard to screen unreliable hearsay. Thus, the intent, basis, and purpose behind the hearsay rule and its exceptions are important knowledge for adjudicators. Professor Ehrhardt will discuss the history behind the rule and the purpose it intends to achieve. He will also explain the most frequent hearsay objections raised in workers' compensation cases and best practices for adjudicators when addressing timely objections.

10:00 – 10:50 am Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Panel:
Dr. Deborah Beidel
University of Central Florida
Orlando, FL

Jill Jacobs, Attorney
City of Palm Bay, City Attorney's Office
Palm Bay, FL

Post-traumatic Stress Disorder is a relevant, increasingly developing, researched and treated condition affecting both military and first responders in the United States. Many jurisdictions are beginning to establish public policy for the compensability and treatment of this condition for first responders. Florida enacted its first PTSD bill covering first responders following the Pulse night club shooting in Orlando. The bill establishes not only grounds for compensability and treatment of this condition but also training and other provisions for active intervention by employers to assist in the early detection and treatment of first responders who might be developing this condition. This presentation will assist adjudicators in understanding the developing law and science behind PTSD.

Division of Administrative Hearings
Pensacola, FL

The ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct has been with us for almost a century. The ethical standards have been readily adopted in various forms by the states, providing guidance for the judiciary. The application of those standards to executive branch judges has been a matter of discussion and debate. Some jurisdictions apply their code statutorily, others regulatorily, and still others decline to apply it. The ABA has recently worked to provide an alternative code specifically for administrative judges. Where can you look for guidance when the ethical issues present?

2:10 – 3:00 pm Judicial Behavior On And Off The Bench: Ten Ways The Wheels
Quickly Fall Off

Speaker:

Marshall L. Davidson, III
Tennessee Board of Judicial Conduct
Nashville, TN

Judges have difficult jobs. They must often make on-the-spot decisions, such as ruling on an objection at trial, with little or no time for reflection. They must grapple with zealous lawyers while at the same time navigating a fine line between ensuring due process and fairness to self-represented litigants and maintaining neutrality and fairness to the opposing side. They must sometimes resolve difficult issues in a legal vacuum, as with an issue of first impression. And, nearly every decision a judge makes is subject to challenge on appeal by any party who believes the decision is wrong. To make matters even more interesting, thousands of ethical complaints are filed each year against judges by lawyers, parties who appear before them, and others. This session examines ways even the most seasoned judge can (sometimes inadvertently) run afoul of the ethics rules.

Adjudicators of workers' compensation claims face an ever-changing landscape of pitfalls. Among those hindrances are: adapting to statutory changes, both substantive and procedural; staying ahead of the curve regarding technology; interpretation and application of presumptions; dealing with difficult witnesses and litigants; and ensuring that the evidentiary record is sufficiently developed to support a just decision. Judges Conner and Moore will lead a discussion of the most significant issues currently impacting the dockets, from both trial court and appellate perspectives.

Before the defense attorney, there is an adjuster who begins evaluating the case. Understanding the evaluation process and the perspective that the adjuster brings to a settlement negotiation (including mediation) can be critical to a successful resolution. Whether adjusters are actively involved in the mediation or operate behind the scenes, understanding the adjuster's viewpoint on the value of a case can affect how a mediator handles the process and can often provide a key to opening the door to resolution.

Speaker:
Paul E. Spector, PhD
Distinguished Professor
University of South Florida
Tampa, FL

If COVID-19 has taught us anything, it is that health and safety leadership is vital during a crisis. People need direction and support to cope with rapidly changing health and safety challenges, as well as increased stress. Using the COVID-19 pandemic as an example, this session would discuss the challenges to organizational leaders in coping with a crisis that creates increased health and safety threats. The presentation will discuss how leaders need to be aware of how health and safety exposures might change, and how they should encourage safety behaviors while providing support for coping with change and uncertainty. A five-step approach to effective health and safety leadership will be provided.

It is well documented that the percentage of workers over 50 years of age has risen dramatically and will continue to rise over the next 20 years. This presentation will explore the implications of this trend for occupational health and safety, and more specifically how the COVID-19 pandemic has impacted older workers. As will be shown, physical and cognitive changes associated with aging make older workers more vulnerable to some workplace hazards. Older workers are also at greatest risk of serious health effects associated with exposure to the SARS-CoV-2 virus. However, it will also be shown that some of the psychological changes associated with aging make older workers safer and more reliable employees in many cases. In addition, research on employee safety suggests that older employees may be more careful in following safety protocols as compared to their younger colleagues. The key is to optimize the positive aspects of aging, while mitigating the negative effects.

11:15 – 12:15 pm Increasing Mindfulness to Improve Workplace Safety

The importance of maintaining a safe workplace cannot be understated. Yet, employees may struggle to actively monitor risk and fulfill safety-related responsibilities given the demands of many workplaces. It can be argued that accidents and injuries are more likely when an employee is mentally “somewhere else” while performing their job duties. Mindfulness, or a non-judgmental present moment awareness, has many work-related benefits including improved employee health, performance, and safety. Yet, many employees may report barriers to participating in formal mindfulness meditation, such as lack of time, lack of knowledge about meditation, or a general lack of interest in meditation. This session discusses tactics for increasing mindfulness in everyday activities, thereby extending the safety-related benefits to all employees. Safety-related challenges and mindfulness-based solutions will be discussed within the context of work safety and well-being challenges.

When COVID-19 hit, organizational leaders scrambled to help their employees navigate new challenges. Some leaders were highly effective at improving their employees' safety and health during this difficult time. Other leaders, even some with the best intentions, were not helpful or made things worse. Drawing from lessons of COVID-19, this session explores what works and what doesn't work when leaders try to support their employees' physical and psychological well-being. Nine key considerations are provided to help drive effective support provision.

Workplace safety and health has been a significant point of focus during the COVID-19 pandemic, particularly among essential and underserved workers who are more vulnerable to economic hardship and health/safety concerns. A useful tool is a Total Worker Health® (TWH) approach to guide workplace preparedness planning to address the unique needs of essential and underserved workers, particularly minority workers. In this session we explore the TWH approach in addressing workplace safety and health hazards, the factors affecting essential and underserved workers, and how to better address these issues in workplace preparedness planning.

DISA Global Solutions, Inc
Lewisburg, PA

The pandemic and natural disasters of 2020/2021 have changed our nation and our world. Early in 2020 we were faced with closing a nation. This change led to unemployment, financial losses, and changes on how work is being completed. Families and industry had to quickly shift to homeschooling their children, while trying to work remotely. Employers had to change how business would be conducted in these challenging times and moving forward. This presentation will reflect on what we learned from 2020/2021 and will discuss the outlook for occupational health and industry in the future. Concepts and trends, such as Total Worker Health, telemedicine/telehealth, and use of social media in a business world will be discussed, as well as "best practice" ideas for the occupational health community post-pandemic.

Preventing and managing workplace injuries, which result in workers' compensation claims, is an important enterprise-wide risk management strategy for employers to implement. This course will demonstrate how implementing a comprehensive approach to loss prevention and therefore creating a culture of safety within an organization results in cost savings as well as better employee engagement and satisfaction. The session will also demonstrate that when a strategic loss prevention program is coupled with enterprise-wide risk/claims management strategies, the proven results include a reduction of workplace injuries and fiscal oriented claims management processes to reduce the impact and costs of an organization's workers' compensation exposures.

Moderator/Speaker:

Compensation

(The actual panel will be selected from those adjudicators that have experienced different reactions to the COVID-19 effects on litigation.)

The beginning of any discussion on the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic as related to workers' compensation claim litigation begins with procedural changes developed by the workers' compensation judiciary in adjudicating issues. These procedural changes relate to hearings before the initial hearing judge and during the appellate processes. Because of quarantine orders from different states, have hearings via Zoom as opposed to in-person proceedings become the norm? Are there challenges that have been addressed in utilizing this method of litigation? Will the use of virtual hearings be the norm in the future? Have virtual hearings including oral arguments caused any savings to the workers' compensation system or afforded injured workers expedited final rulings in litigated cases? Is there anything that can be learned or special skills needed to adapt to virtual vs. actual live hearings? Have there been any lessons learned during the COVID period of litigation that would be the basis of reform for future litigation practices? These and other questions will be answered by this learned panel who have been a part of the "COVID-Age" litigation process.

What has the Pandemic taught us? How has the pandemic financially impacted WC system Stakeholders. Investigating claims during a pandemic such as obtaining medical record, the use of contact tracing and other technology to resolve disputed claims will be topics of discussion. Using technology to resolve disputed claims and how we stopped worrying and “love the Zoom.” Going forward after the Pandemic, what will we keep in the toolbox which includes a discussion on telemedicine, remote mediation, remote settlement hearings, and remote depositions. Lessons learned during the pandemic will include a discussion of remote dispute adjudication and being able to assess the credibility of witnesses, managing documents remotely, utilizing video and audio recordings remotely and arguing cases remotely. The effects of the Pandemic vary from state to state and lessons learned in one state can be the answer to how the same issue is dealt with in another state. Maybe some of the experiences of the “Covid years” can play a role in the development of future litigation processes. All of these issues will be discussed by legal practitioners from some of the largest WC venues in America.

On January 30, 2020, the WHO declared the COVID-19 outbreak a global health emergency. On March 11, 2020, the WHO declared COVID-19 a global pandemic. On March 13, 2020, the United States declared COVID a national emergency. As a result of our experience in dealing with COVID cases, it was learned that sick employees must stay home, creating new and enhanced protocols about keeping common/highly touched areas disinfected. We also learned of the strong possibility of the permanent remote workplace being adopted having a possible significant effect on the well-being of employees. This panel will discuss the risks surrounding those issues as well as what we saw medically, legally, and safety-wise from a workers' compensation and safety level. Additionally, we will discuss the importance of having a crisis/EAP plan in place and the steps needed to notify and protect workers. A contingency plan “ready to roll” has been proven critical to employers to maintain safe, thriving organizations able to alter their business model or re-tool an existing model quickly.

Making ethical decisions in the workers' compensation arena is paramount to how an adjuster does his or her job every day. Think you are just one of thousands of adjusters handling workers' compensation claims and won't get caught if you are not acting in good faith? Think again! Learn about the most recent disciplinary decisions and enforcement actions, especially how they may affect you or your company. Learn the proper terminology and how to apply it every day. Also examined are unauthorized products and entities involved in commerce that will adversely effect how you do business. Lastly, we will provide an update on pertinent federal law including Medicare and its effect on state workers' compensation issues.

The injured worker may suffer chronic pain due to an industrial accident. Historically, opioids have been utilized to reduce pain, but they have long-term risks which may outweigh benefits. We will examine two novel therapies which reduce pain without opioids: spinal cord stimulation and virtual reality. Significant advances in technology have improved outcomes for spinal cord stimulation, such as providing greater than 70% pain relief of the trunk and limbs, reducing or eliminating opioid use, and reducing costs associated with treatment. The use of virtual reality to treat chronic pain will be examined. We will explain the mechanism of action, outline the best practices in its application, and present case studies where it has been successful as an alternative to opioids. Finally, we will have a panel discussion and live question and answer session.

We live busy and challenging professional lives. We are faced with a myriad of data points, metrics, goals, objectives, corporate initiatives and priorities, but a limited amount of time to devote to the things that matter most to quality claims management. While there are matters like compliance and people development that are givens, what are the most important focuses for our programs that lead to quality claims outcomes? What are the claims strategies and initiatives that best drive results?

Hear from seasoned risk managers (all A+ players) on their “three things” and how they drive those focuses to produce better outcomes and results for their companies. These risk managers will share what has worked well for them, and their lessons learned from experience.

This program is for claims and risk professionals, attorneys, brokers, insurers, and service providers who strive to effectively manage their company’s and client’s casualty claims. The information is well suited for self-administered and outsourced claims programs of all sizes.

We have all seen plenty of programs about what is “next” for the workers’ compensation industry: an aging and multi-lingual workforce, telemedicine, the gig economy and work from home, among others. All of this is accurate, but suffers from “2020 Vision.” This panel will discuss what comes after “next” for workers’ compensation. We will ask three of the most prominent and respected representatives of the legal, TPA, and broker communities all of whom have “2025 Vision,” to think about how the law, economics, technology, health care reform, immigration, domestic politics, demographics, and labor market changes will impact workers’ compensation, not in the next five years, but in the five years after that. All keeping in mind Richard Victor’s prescription, “If we continue to do the things that have made us successful in the past, then we will be successful in the past.”

While organizations are unique, many face similar challenges. And while every injured worker's situation is different, there are many similarities among their most basic needs. There is no better way to elevate your program and improve your injured worker's experience than by hearing the challenges, strategies, and successes as shared by other employers. In this session, you will hear three industry leaders offer pragmatic suggestions and practical insights into such issues as how to engage a workforce characterized by high turnover, how advocacy programs have evolved since being introduced, alternative approaches designed to streamline claims reporting, creative settlement strategies with the injured worker in mind, practical ways technology is being used to support program performance, legislative highlights to track in the coming months, and ways to deal with crises that can leave a scarring impact on your workforce. This session promises to be one of the most engaging and enlightening discussions you will hear, and we invite you to be a part of these candid conversations.

Claims' professionals face new questions and challenges every day. Each claim is based on a unique set of facts and circumstances. In turn, claims professionals must follow and apply statutory guidelines and regulations that vary across jurisdictions and are subject to frequent change. To this mix, employers create unique client service instructions based on their operations. The resulting claims decisions impact a sizeable sum of money but more importantly, they affect the lives of the individual employees. This session is designed to address some of the key questions employers should ask as they look for ways to improve their workers' compensation programs. For example: To what extent can claim professionals impact workers' compensation outcomes? How can employers and claims professionals work together to improve the overall claims experience and program results? How much of any effect can be attributed to observable characteristics or any one initiative? What role does emotional intelligence play in the claims process? How do biopsychosocial factors shape and influence an advocacy approach? Our discussion and interaction will shed invaluable insight on these and other related issues that will enhance virtually any claims program.

Amputations provide a unique challenge in workers' compensation from a clinical, financial, and legal standpoint. The injury is catastrophic and permanent, but the prospects of returning to work are also within reach. The implications of an amputation will vary depending on the level of the amputation, whether it is upper or lower extremity, and what the injured employee's job duties and lifestyle may be. If managed properly, the patient can regain the ability to experience activities of daily living at the highest possible level and claim costs can be reasonably managed. However, if not handled properly, costs can quickly get out of control and the injured worker will grow frustrated. Among the topics to be covered will be the guidelines for evaluating patients for their devices, the timelines associated with the provision of devices, lifetime costs, legal implications specific to prosthetics, and the overall impact on claims. This discussion will bring together perspectives from the clinical, claims, and legal aspects.

The most utilized ancillary services in workers' compensation cases are transportation and language services. It is so important to comply with state regulations and to assure that those vendors who are in direct contact with the injured worker understand the unique needs of injured or ill people. This session will address those needs and how to best communicate with your vendor partner to assure that what is being done to provide service to the injured worker is consistent with best practices and meets their needs for safety and efficiency.

The home modification world has revolutionized the meaning of accessibility with the introduction of technology products such as Amazon's Alexa or Google's Nest thermostat. What does this have to do with workers' compensation? Everything, when it comes to catastrophic cases that require home modifications. Imagine a paraplegic being able to come home and say "Alexa, turn on the lights" without having to maneuver to get to a light switch. This technology provides the injured worker an entirely new type of independence and possibly reduces the need for an in-home aide. Join us for this session as we learn about how technology is transforming home modifications, thus leading to cost containment and a better quality of life for injured workers.

Research shows that if an injured worker is off the job for three months, the chances of that worker returning to full employment are reduced and the cost of the claim increased. When an employer is unable to provide light-duty work during the recovery period, it is important to find a safe and appropriate role in an alternative environment. This expert panel will discuss their real life experiences implementing transitional programs, including the challenges faced and strategies used to overcome resistance. Attendees will leave with an appreciation for the impact transitional programs have on injured workers, an understanding of best practices common to successful programs, and a plan for measuring transitional return to work programs.

Much of the discussion around the opioid epidemic has focused on the scope of the problem and the addictive properties of opioids. Recently, regulators, insurers, and health professionals have begun to focus on solutions. We begin with reviewing employer surveys on the impact of the opioid crisis. We then discuss strategies that we already know to be effective, as well as emerging strategies that should help us finally end the crisis. These include physical therapy, chiropractic, psychological treatment alternatives, and non-opioid pharmacological options. More generally, we argue for a broader focus on the bio-psycho-social context of chronic pain and a re-thinking of coverage policies by public and private-sector insurers.

A record number four exclamation marks (!) in our title may not be too many for this momentous presentation, brought to you by one of the best informed commentators in the country, who provides a crucial update -- more accurate to say heads-up warning -- on goings-on at CMS. Covered are new mandatory insurer reporting requirements and consequences; conditional repayment reimbursements now being pursued by the US DOJ against employers, carriers, TPAs, injured workers and their attorney firms (including in auto, liability, and no-fault claims). Understand newly enacted (February 2020) Civil Money Penalty Rules! Leading federal cases against law firms are also carefully analyzed. This course is not here to scare you but to equip you on how to prepare -- both prophylactically, to head off trouble before it starts, and reactively, should trouble come.

Trust but verify, a proverb popularized near the end of the Cold War, is a fitting description of industry's obligation -- yes obligation -- to properly conserve the flow of WC assets. Unlike other areas of law, in accepted claims we start with a host of obligations to our so-called adversaries who in turn are obliged to be truthful in all dealings. But human nature being what it is, the temptation to take more sometimes takes hold, and every claims entity must have means of assuring outgoing monies are well spent. But: these things, as the Witch of the West noted, "must be done delicately." Overreach or misstep, and your organization will come to trouble, so much so that some have abandoned all effort, which is the wrong take-away! What are the flags and triggers? What are the latest, most appropriate means? And finally -- where many good cases tank -- how to insure that what is found is also usable!

Recent studies now prove faith can play a significant role in promoting faster -- and more complete -- recovery from injury. Yet faith is rarely discussed or encouraged as a recovery tool in the workers' compensation system. For this presentation to bear fruit -- that is -- to assist you in improving claims outcomes, our panelists equip you with tangible, practical means to help overcome obstacles in the path of harnessing a worker's faith as another tool in the arsenal toward achieving faster and more complete recoveries. You know something is going on here. Come and be part of it: help them help you help others.

As the workers' compensation industry continues to evolve, its focus on physical and emotional needs of injured workers, industry professionals -- at every level -- must refuel and recharge, so that they may better empathize with EACH worker served. "People's Choice" presents inspiring, intensely personal and deeply engaging insight into core principles informing WC claims from all perspectives, including those of the injured worker. For its inaugural appearance at the Workers' Compensation Educational Conference, speakers have all been "People's Choice Awards" finalists. In timed six-minute vignettes our five finalists employ storytelling to recount life-changing events and moments of reflection which served as agents of change, supporting better claims handling vis-à-vis personal growth. New to our People's Choice format: we will conduct a cathartic question-and-answer session afterward. In short: we are changing the narrative in WC, and the excitement will be palpable: there'll be far more than one "round of applause" for this one, so grab a seat early!

Accentuate the positive! Return to work is universally acknowledged as a core workers' compensation value, yet many in claims and in industry have grown complacent -- and their workers' compensation programs suffer for it. You can either help ensure the injured worker is again earning a paycheck, or you can pay the worker (and attorney) yourself: it's often that simple. A revitalized stance and fresh look at vocational rehabilitation and return to work will reveal many new tools hiding in plain sight, e.g., effectively leveraging government agency resources, especially in the light of new federal emphasis. Also covered are several specific state scenarios. Our panelists bring diversified professional backgrounds providing insight into what is often called the key to the courthouse, because successful re-integration back into the work force preempts most of the ills attributable to WC, certainly including litigation expenditures.

This is the latest in our series of ethical conversations inspired by the Faith Based Claims Association, founded by our NWCR co-chair and presenter, Bill Pipkin. Artificial Intelligence (AI) is THE hot topic. It's everywhere -- and yet it's nowhere: it is nowhere, yet omnipresent. Is anyone there? Who can I talk to?

What ethical questions are raised by the rapid pace of technological advancement in specific claims applications? How do we discuss much less manage it effectively? No one is saying go backward -- but perhaps more should be asking how to better harness these new capabilities without sacrificing essential human elements in successful claims management.

Our illustrious panelists stoke the fires, sharing thoughtful insights into these and related issues as we all learn to walk the sometimes amazing -- sometimes terrifying -- line between encroaching technology and human empathy.

Once a claim is denied, the legal portion of the claim starts immediately. Active participants will be a claimant, adjuster, client company, defense attorney, claimant attorney, mediator, and the judge. This group will demonstrate, via role play, the importance of understanding how claim decisions and actions or inactions affect the legal aspect of claims. Specifically, how very small decisions can impact the legalities in every facet of the process which can ultimately lead to unanticipated consequences. Learn the mediation process from an actual mediator who will provide insight on what went right and what went wrong.

Explicit or conscious bias by an adjudicator can often be easily spotted or felt in workers' compensation proceedings. Generally, it is evinced by the words, deeds, or actions of an adjudicator that are intentionally exhibited and reasonably interpreted as inappropriate and offensive. On the other hand, the implication of implicit (unconscious) bias is more difficult to readily appreciate or detect by both the perpetrator and receiver of the information. This latter type of bias progressively develops over time as the individual experiences life and the environment causing certain stereotypes and bias, often without even realizing they exist. The presenters will help identify certain conditions that exacerbate implicit biases, negatively impacting decision-making. They will also suggest strategies to eliminate, or at least reduce, the impact of implicit biases when adjudicators render decisions.

2:10 – 3:10 pm Evidence: Ruling In The Moment

Speaker:

Chief Judge Don A. Myers, Jr.
*Ninth Judicial Circuit of Florida
Orlando, FL*

Ruling in the moment is an everyday occurrence for busy trial judges. During the course of the trial, judges must rule in the moment on a variety of evidentiary issues. These rulings often affect the outcome of the trial, especially rulings related to the admissibility of documentary evidence or oral testimony. The purpose of this presentation is to assist adjudicators in understanding frequently occurring evidentiary objections and discussion of proper rulings.

3:10 – 4:00 pm Judges Getting Jobs: Judicial Selection And Retention In State Systems

Speaker:

William Raftery
*National Center for State Courts
Williamsburg, VA*

NCSC's senior knowledge and information services analyst will lead a walk across America examining state judicial selection and retention programs, providing insight regarding the growth and opportunities for judicial performance evaluation programs at the state level.

Return-To-Work Breakout

Inclusion: The Framework for Return to Work Success

7:45 – 12:00 pm Crystal Ballroom H
Convention Level

Return to work demands that we see ability versus disability. These breakout sessions focus on inclusion as the key tenet of building a successful team that accommodates, understands, and overcomes all of the unique challenges that occur after an injury. We will focus on building cooperative working relationships with employers, carriers, unions, case managers, third-party administrators, and physicians. We will offer a solid framework and parameters for viable job accommodation. Attendees will learn from someone who has overcome the challenges of living with a disability while still having an amazing life's journey.

Three public entities, Miami Dade County Public Schools, City of Miami Beach, and City of Coral Gables will speak about return to work in their unionized environments. Our panel will discuss how work injury claims and return-to-work duties are impacted when multiple unions and collective bargaining agreements need to be respected. Our subjects include: How do you deal with departments within your organization that do not want to accommodate the injured worker's restrictions? How long should you keep an injured worker in a light-duty capacity? And how do you handle disciplinary issues while the employee is on light or modified duty?

One of the challenges employers face when returning injured employees to work is legal compliance. Even if the employee is not represented by an attorney, there are overlapping laws that govern the employee's tenure with the organization. The question most every employer asks – Can I do that legally? The answer is often "maybe." This session will evaluate the legal aspect of return to work with overlapping laws like the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). The unique part of this session is that we will hear from an expert in workplace disability accommodation who is also disabled. We will learn from him the challenges and opportunities to make reasonable accommodations that will work and benefit everyone. By the end of this session, attendees will have a greater understanding of how to stay legally compliant in every aspect of the injury from obtaining medical treatment, to accessing service within a medical network in Texas, to working with the third-party administrator, and to finding cost effective accommodation tools.

This presentation discusses one of the areas that we never discuss in our role advocating for injured and disabled employees. A critical question for employers and all stakeholders in the workers' compensation system, given its complexity, is how do you effectively advocate for injured employees? If we struggle as practitioners to understand the workers' compensation system – can we fathom how injured employees feel when they attempt to navigate the medical treatment process? This session will evaluate what happens from the time employees are injured until they are returned to work at full duty. The speakers will walk attendees through a case scenario that starts at the time of the injury and proceeds to the interactions with the carrier, third-party administrator, the occupational medical clinic, the referral to an orthopedic surgeon, and case management interventions along the way. By the end of this session, attendees will have a better understanding of how to deploy inclusive advocacy within the lifecycle of the claim.

COVID hit hard in early 2020, and its impact was immediately felt in the DBA and Longshore claim community. This panel will explore the potential short and long-term impacts of the pandemic on the claims' community. Additionally, the panel will discuss delayed-onset claims that create unique litigation and administration issues for claimants, employers, and carriers. This will address the initial procedural aspects of a claim, from claim initiation through the end of the informal conference process. The speakers will discuss claims investigation for older files, OWCP investigation and administration of delayed-onset claims, potential last responsible carrier issues, and even potential concurrent coverage issues depending on the government contracting agency.

CMS's Division of Medicare Secondary Payer Operations (MSP) oversees all aspects of MSP compliance, including Section 111 Mandatory Insurer Reporting, Medicare conditional payment recovery, and workers' compensation Medicare Set-Aside review and approval. Its policies and requirements are far reaching and especially impact the settlement of workers' compensation cases. This panel of government officials will explain CMS' role, provide the latest information on MSP programs and answer your questions on matters pertaining to expectations for MSP compliance.

MSAs tend to get all the attention at the time of settlement. However, Medicare conditional payments, including Medicare Advantage plan lien resolution, deserve equal time with claim settlement. From the perspective of the insurance carrier, attorney, and Medicare recovery contractor, this panel will address obvious Medicare conditional payment practices, as well as blind spots which can cause trouble for settling parties. The panel will cover disputing and appealing conditional payment charges and avoiding Treasury Department involvement to discharge Medicare obligations with confidence.

Twenty years after the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) formally launched its Workers' Compensation Medicare Set-Aside (WCMSA) review and approval process, the concept of not submitting an MSA represents an increasing trend. However, the MSA submission route is still the preference for most employers and carriers. While addressing the MSA non-submission route, this panel will concentrate its discussion on how to achieve an MSA submission program that yields cost-effective settlements while protecting the injured worker.

*Senior Risk Control Consultant
Arthur J. Gallagher, Inc
Boca Raton, FL*

For years the safety profession focused on one dimensional “body count” metrics such as the incident rate or the lost-time accident rate. While these rates may be adequate to cover one type of loss they do not represent the greater scope of losses that can potentially happen to an organization. Making matters worse, this one-dimensional metric can give an organization a false sense of security that their safety program has addressed all of their risks. This presentation will address how expanding your metrics will allow you to focus on a greater scope of risks and will in the process change how your role in your organization is viewed.

11:15 – 12:15 pm Workplace Violence – Protecting Our StaffSpeaker:Kim Olszewski, DNP, CRNP, COHN-S/
CM, FAAOHN, FAAN
*Director of Client and Medical Provider
Services
DISA Global Solutions, Inc
Lewisburg, PA*

For purposes of this presentation, workplace violence is defined as, the act or threat of violence, ranging from verbal abuse to physical assaults directed toward persons at work or on duty. NIOSH reviews of Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) describes workplace violence nonfatal injuries in the private sector as follows: 71% were female, 64% were aged 25 to 54, 73% worked in the healthcare and social assistance industry, 20% required 31 or more days away from work to recover, and 21% involved 3 to 5 days away from work. The objective of this presentation will focus on risk factors and prevention strategies for workplace violence. The audience will understand that workplace violence is a growing concern for women. The presentation will also discuss the various resources to reduce occupational violence.

Lessons Learned and Moving Forward: 2020/2021 in the Rearview Mirror – Cyber Security (Day 3)

8:00 – 12:15 pm Crystal Ballroom J1
Convention Level

The last “2020/2021 in the Rear View Mirror” series of breakout sessions is in response to the 2020/2021 significant news concerning cyber breaches at both the governmental and private industry levels, oftentimes not detected for months after an initial occurrence. This should be a reminder that cybersecurity remains a significant concern for all, especially for ALL stakeholders in the workers’ compensation system. As a matter of law and procedural dictates in the oversight of workers’ compensation, increased data/information retention is being required of employers, PEOs, temporary staffing companies, carriers, attorneys (both claimant and defense), medical care providers (physicians, hospitals, pharmaceuticals, etc.), regulators, courts, and others. Information being retained includes financial records, health records, and other sensitive information that unquestionably needs to be protected from general publication, failure of which could create very real financial liabilities to everyone, most especially to the entity that failed to provide proper protection, security or inadequate follow-up. This is a first-of-its-kind series of breakout sessions offered by WCI and is in response to the very disturbing news of increased cyber breach incidents that are seemingly becoming commonplace.

8:00 – 10:00 am Cybersecurity Risk Management for your Organization

Speaker and Moderator:

David Langham
*Deputy Chief Judge of Compensation Claims
Pensacola, FL*

Speakers:

Eman El-Sheikh, PhD
*Associate Vice President
Center for Cybersecurity
University of West Florida
Pensacola, FL*

Guy Garrett, MS, MBA
*Assistant Director
Center for Cybersecurity
University of West Florida
Pensacola, FL*

Cyber breaches rob an organization of time, money, and reputation. The threat grows daily, making Cyber Risk Management, fraud detection, and prevention vital to financial stability. Learn the different types of cyber breaches, demands being made by the perpetrators, and the potential losses that can result. Ransom and other breaches cost organizations billions annually. How can you protect against financial loss and interruptions to your business? What does it take to safeguard data? How do you plan, implement, and monitor a Cyber Security Risk Management Plan? What do your employees need to know? This session is designed to help you proactively manage cyber risks.

But first, there must be a complete understanding of why Cyber Security Standards are relevant to the workers’ compensation system, perhaps more so than many others. What kind of data or information is collected by workers’ compensation stakeholders as a matter of law and voluntarily based on good business practices? What are the effects of cyber breaches on the workers’ compensation industry?

Lessons Learned and Moving Forward: 2020/2021
in the Rearview Mirror – Cyber Security (Day 1)

Crystal Ballroom J1, Convention Level

10:00 – 10:15 am Break

10:15 – 11:15 am Caught in a Dark Web

Speaker:

Ron Frechette
Founder & CEO
GoldSky Cyber Security, LLC
Orlando, FL

This course will introduce attendees to each level of the World Wide Web with an emphasis on how cyber criminals are using the Dark Web to perform illegal activities and monetize their efforts. The program includes taking attendees on a live tour of the Dark Web so they can have a first-hand look into what is considered to be “Hell on the Internet.” The presentation will teach attendees who the current threat actors are, how they are attacking, and their primary motives for targeting industries. Attendees will learn about the components of a digital footprint. Case Studies of recent data breaches will be shared and how they could have been prevented. This session is intended to educate attendees on current compliance laws and statutes at the state and federal levels and the ethical responsibilities to protect data. It introduces a cyber risk management system that is easy to understand and implement and concludes with “do it yourself security tips” that will dramatically reduce the risks of cyberattacks, malware threats, and data breaches.

11:15 – 12:15 pm Case Law Update Related to First and Third Party Claims including Insurance Coverage for Claimed Losses from Cyber Breaches

Speaker:

Eric Adams, Partner
Shutts & Bowen, LLP
Tampa, FL

A cyber breach allowed by you can certainly result in devastating damages to your business. But what about damages incurred by third parties whose data was compromised by a breach caused by you? More and more, customers and clients are insisting that by contract or otherwise, you indemnify them for any damages resulting to their business caused by your failure to have in place a viable cyber security plan (third party claims). What financial liabilities are assumed by you for the protection of data or information of others? Is there insurance coverage in place that would provide defense expenses and/or pay for damages to third persons? To what extent is your chosen insurance company liable to you for damages suffered by you (first party claims)? This presentation is designed to make workers' compensation stakeholders understand and appreciate the potential financial consequences of failing to be attentive to essential components of protecting cyber information in these ever-changing times.

Breakout on Medical Issues

Claim Closure Project Manager
AON
Tampa, FL

Stephen Rios
Director of National Business Development
Transcom Solutions
Atlanta, GA

Miranda Kofeldt, PhD
Clinical Director
Ascellus Behavioral Health
St. Petersburg, FL

Historically, school bus drivers were in the news as the recipients of beatings administered by students and parents. Gun violence is in the news every day. In 2000-2012 there were 110 active shooter events in the United States. In 2019 there were 417. Lawsuits abound against school districts and large employers. Can policies and procedures be instituted to decrease the exposure to employers and carriers? Listen to an actual eye-witness account of public violence!

11:15 – 12:15 pm “Getting the Upper Hand” -
A Course in Soft Tissue Injuries of the Hand

Speaker:
Thomas J. Zaydon, Jr., MD
Plastic Surgery Institute of Miami
Miami, FL

Upper extremity injuries collectively account for 95 million restricted activity days and 16 million days of absence in the workplace. The total economic impact is enormous. You will learn the anatomy of the hand and how it’s properly examined. Infections, along with skin, nerve and tendon injuries will be covered. You will also be taught what types of injuries require referral to a specialist. It’s time for you to get the upper hand – don’t miss this one!

The Defense Base Act applies to foreign nationals just as it applies to United States citizens. With Employers hiring large numbers of third country nationals from locales around the world (e.g., the Balkans and Africa), litigation involving those nationals has increased. Here, we will discuss the ins-and-outs of litigating these claims before the Office of Administrative Law Judges and eventually resolving the claims via mediation and settlement. Mass notices of hearing to streamline litigation for foreign national claims, telehealth, and sufficiency and admissibility of evidence will also be explored.

10:40 – 10:50 am Break

10:50 – 12:00 pm Case Law Update

Over the past year, federal courts and the Benefits Review Board has issued a number of important decisions involving the borrowed servant doctrine, diligent job searches, jurisdiction, maximum medical improvement, modification, situs, status, and more. Our panelists take you through the important decisions.

Breakout on Multi-State Workers' Compensation Laws

Sponsored by the Workers' Compensation Defense Institute (WCDI)

8:30 – 3:45 pm Grand Ballroom 7A
Convention Level

While continuing the trend of offering workers' compensation topics and presentations to address current events and the interests of our audience, the Multi-State Breakout will cover national and state-specific workers' compensation issues in both a thought provoking and entertaining format this year. However, in order to increase our attendees' ability to obtain information and learn new trends across multiple state lines, we are expanding our breakout sessions to three separate programs. The program will utilize popular holiday movie clips to teach and facilitate lively and entertaining discussions concerning common and trending issues affecting compensability of workers' compensation claims in numerous jurisdictions.

Before and after a WCDI provided lunch, the very unique and extremely popular state-specific breakout presentations will begin. The presentations will take place in three rooms, each room consisting of a panel of five different states, with each session lasting one hour and forty minutes. Unlike past years, however, we will offer two sessions in the morning and one in the afternoon, thereby allowing participants to hear from all fifteen of our member jurisdictions. This year, once again, the format will incorporate the use of popular movie clips to teach about and facilitate fun and lively discussion concerning common issues of compensability across multiple jurisdictions. Handout materials will be available for each jurisdiction, and the topics covered will include injuries to remote/home employees, PTSD claims, effective tools for closing a case, impairment/intoxication defenses, the impact of legalized marijuana, and hot topics impacting each jurisdiction.

The day will culminate with our closing session where prizes will be given to the persons attending the breakout sessions. Importantly, the 2021 multi-state workers' compensation laws, rules, regulations, and forms from each of our jurisdictions will be distributed to all attendees during this closing session. This is an invaluable resource tool for any employer or claims handler conducting business in more than one of our states. This booklet will also include easy reference to rules and form filing deadlines.

Large MSAs can toss your settlement strategy off the table. Flipping to an approach that is proactive, cost effective, and manages risk is a sure bet. Don't rely on beginner's luck. Medicare compliance can be a high-stakes world that requires foresight, claims oversight, and strategic planning.

Variations And Application In The Trenches

Panel:

Honorable David B. Torrey
*Pennsylvania Department of Labor & Industry
Pittsburgh, PA*

Andrew E. Greenberg, Attorney
The Chartwell Law Offices
Eagleville, PA

The operative liability principle of workers' compensation is no fault. The presentation will review the variety of state laws, addressing certain defenses that nonetheless exist: intoxication and violation of law. The panel members will discuss how these defenses are litigated and adjudicated.

9:50 – 10:00 am Break

10:00 – 11:00 am Access To Justice

Panel:

Honorable Laura T. Bradley
Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals

Workers' Compensation*
Harahan, LA

Professor Luz Molina
Loyola University New Orleans, College of Law
New Orleans, LA

Honorable Knowrasa Patrick
Washington Board of Industrial Accident Appeals
Olympia, WA

Injured workers are often deprived of access to justice for various reasons. This session will focus on the inability of certain groups of individuals to appear in court due to their limited English proficiency. During this session, you will hear from a law school professor and several judges who are actively involved with Access to Justice programs that focus on barriers experienced by individuals with limited English-speaking abilities. They will discuss ways to identify the problem and provide advice and solutions to address it.

11:00 – 11:50 am Judicial Independence

Panel:

Abbie Hudgens, Administrator
Tennessee Bureau of Workers' Compensation
Nashville, TN

Honorable Sheral Kellar
Louisiana Workforce Commission
Baton Rouge, LA

Honorable Frank R. McKay
*Georgia State Board of Workers'
Compensation*
Atlanta, GA

Honorable James Szablewicz
Virginia Workers' Compensation Commission
Richmond, VA

How do states ensure the decisional independence of their judges? This panel is made up of heads of agencies representing two models: (1) an administrative agency that includes a specialized court to hear and resolve disputes and (2) a commission that is charged with resolution of disputes and administration of the system. The panel will have an open discussion of the policies or practices in their jurisdictions regarding decisional independence and its effects. They will discuss case law as well as issues that might be "taboo" and how they can be addressed.

ALTERNATIVE PROGRAMMING:

8:30 – 3:15 pm Conference on Multi-State
Workers' Compensation Laws

Grand Ballrooms 7A & 1-6, Convention Level

Sponsored by the Workers' Compensation Defense Institute, this program provides insight and edification about the inner workings of Alabama, California, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas. This program features employers, attorneys, claims handlers, and state administrators from the different states discussing the significant developments and distinctions of their respective jurisdictions. See pages 76-77.

The Alliance of Women in Workers' Compensation is proud to bring the WCI conference attendees and our followers an empowering and inspirational leadership workshop, The Happiness Effect.

Long before the pandemic, the Alliance was interested in offering a session on positive psychology allowing us to dig into the research fueling positivity and optimism. And, given the effects of lock downs and social distancing, what a fitting topic for this workshop! How do you take your best self to work each day and in your personal life? Are you communicating effectively and heard by your audience. How does your communication and demeanor impact whether others are drawn to you or steer away? Join us for this engaging session as we bridge the gap between academic research and the real world. You will learn and find inspiration while pushing your personal and professional growth.
